JOHN D. ECKERT DIED TODAY

John D. Eckert, for many years a well known lawyer, died this morning at the Kingston City Hospital, where he had been ill for several weeks, prior to which time for the past three years he had been an inmate of the City Home.

Mr. Eckert was a son of the late Daniel Eckert, who was one of the most prominent members of St. James's M. E. Church. He was educated at Kingston Academy and studied law in the office of the late Judge William Lawton and Seymour L. Stebbins. Early in his life he became a student of languages and was fond of reading Greek and Latin classics in the original. Later he took up the study of French, Sanskrit and other languages and was regarded as one of the best students of linguistics in this section of the state. Mr. Eckert was fond of research work and spent many hours in searching for authorities on some particular point of law in which he was interested, although not having any personal interest in the case in which such point might be raised. He was fond of poetry and his knowledge of poets was extensive. He possessed a remarkable memory and was fond of entertaining friends with recitals of long poems, or entire cantos from famous works. He was also a Shakespearean scholar and in his reading he displayed a voracious appetite not only for knowledge but for the finer passages of literature. As an attorney he displayed great tenacity of purpose and his cases were frequently carried by him to the court of appeals.

Mr. Eckert had been out of health for the past eight years, his trouble having begun after he had severely burned one of his toes. Amputation finally was necessary and for a long time the wound did not heal. He gave up active practice several years but occupied desk room in the office of the late Judge N. Frank O'Reilly for several years. Mr. Eckert never married. He is survived by one brother, the Rev. Edward O. Eckert.

FERRIES ALONE DELAYED AUTOISTS

Holiday Crush of Traffic Found Under Bonds All in Their Favor But as Many as 200 Cars Were in Line At One Time Waiting To Cross River.

Beginning last Thursday tourists bound for the mountains began to make their appearance and the numbers increased daily until Saturday night when the peak was reached. All roads leading into Kingston were crowded with cars and the ferries were taxed to capacity to get the cars across the river. Although the Rhinebeck ferry ran continually carrying capacity loads many of the late arrivals at the ferry had to wait several hours in order to get across. Monday the cars were homeward bound and the congestion was on this side of the river. At one time the number of cars in line waiting for the ferry was over 200, and the line extended along the Strand to Hasbrouck avenue and up Hasbrouck avenue beyond the Ulster & Delaware crossing some distance.

Many tourists who had waited several hours for the ferry on the up trip sought some other route on the way home and many cars passed through Edenville and over the bridge to Newburgh or Highland where they crossed the river or continued down on the west shore of the river to New York before crossing.

On the whole the tourists met with unusually good road conditions. The roads in Ulster county are in excellent order and no detours were encountered. Ulster county, one of the best posted counties in the state since the Ulster County Automobile Club erected signs some time ago, is appreciated by tourists after traveling through some of the other counties where the signs have been neglected.

The roads radiating from Kingston are all in good condition this season. The Ellenville road is in good condition all the way to Ellenville. Between Ellenville and Wurtsboro for 12 miles the road is rough but from Wurtsboro to Port Jervis the road is in good condition.

Going north the road to Albany is generally good as far as Ravena, South of the village of Ravena there is a short stretch of rough road but the concrete through the village is good. North of Ravena to Albany the road is rough.

Between Kingston and Newburgh the road is in fine shape with a few short rough stretches. The Oneonta road is also in good condition.

Road conditions throughout the county are generally better this season than in some time and there is practically no construction going on which necessitates detours.

Golden Wedding At Modena.

TABLET UNVEILING WAS IMPRESSIVE

Impressive services and ideal weather marked the unveiling of the memorial tablet containing the names of the 1,500 sons of Kingston who participated in the world war on Sunday afternoon at the city hall. The memorial tablet was presented by the industrial workers of the city who had contributed the necessary funds. The tablet itself was designed by James Edward Kelly, the famous sculptor, who was also present at the unveiling. There was a large crowd on Broadway and the adjacent grounds.

Mayor Canfield presided at the ceremony and Captain Herbert Young of the Salvation Army led the audience in the singing of "America" to the accompaniment of the recently organized Citizens' Band, who had donated their services for the occasion. Prayer was offered by the Rev. F. B. Sealey of the Fair Street Reformed Church.

Kenneth Canfield, clad in his army uniform, and Peter Jordan in his navy uniform, representing both branches of the service, handled the halyards and unveiled the tablet, which had been hidden from view under the folds of Old Glory. As the tablet was unveiled the Citizens' Band played the Red, White and Blue.

In the rear of the tablet had been erected a platform which was occupied by the speakers of the day, and members of the clergy, and a committee of industrial workers. The industrial committee was composed of Thomas F. Rice, Alderman William B. Martin, Frank Richardson, Thomas Kelly, William Millham, Charles W. Grant, Joseph Dauch, Joseph Southard, George Moore, John Mahla, W. Scott Van Kuren, Richard Dowe, Edward Olson, Edward F. Stock, Frank Struble, Michael Dumas, Frank Schafel, Herbert T. Van Dusen and F. H. Caray.

Joseph Drake spoke in behalf of Mr. Kelly, and paid an eloquent tribute to the man who had designed the beautiful bronze tablet.

During the evening the band rendered a Glee musical program, and Miss Virginia Lee Kamp, contralto soloist and choir director of the Broadview Presbyterian Church, sang the Marseillaise and the Star Spangled Banner accompanied by the band.

The tablet was formally presented to the service boys by Mayor Canfield in an eloquent address, and was formally received by Attorney Thomas F. Coughlin in behalf of the boys whose names were inscribed on the tablet.

The last speaker of the afternoon was James O'Hanlon of Albany and Troy, one of the important labor leaders in the state, who also delivered a stirring address.

The services were brought to a close with the benediction pronounced by the Rev. Cornelius Norris of St. Mary's Church. Taps were sounded by William White.

Seed Electrification.

There appears to be much interest in the electrification of seeds and the application of electricity to growing plants, says the Scientific American. A recent account of work along these lines tells of a new method of aiding plant growth. The seeds, ten or 20 each, are placed in tanks provided with iron electrodes at both ends; the electrolyte is a solution of sodium nitrate or some other fertilizer. Particularly with cereals—wheat, barley and oats—the yields of both grain and straw are said to be increased. Some 500 farmers have taken up the treatment of the seeds, which is followed by a very careful drying in a kiln made of two layers of straw.

Efficiency on Italian Farms.

The Italian ministry of agriculture is determined to make every acre in Italy do its bit. With this maximum production in view, an agricultural survey will be made to reveal every plot that is yielding less than it should. The backward farmer will then be given assistance in increasing the fertility of his land. In cases where the individual is unable, or unwilling, to co-operate, the government will insist on substituting or on a forced sale.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Our Meat From China.

The Tsingtau district of China promises to become a great meat-growing country and contracts have been made calling for the export of great quantities of meat to the United States.

Story telling to children in the streets of crowded tenement sections of Boston is becoming quite the rage, and a number of young women students of schools of expression are interesting themselves in the work, as well as the Women's Municipal League, co-operating with the Massachusetts University Extension. It was found that this means of reaching the children stimulates their Americanism and is a valuable aid to tired mothers, as well as proving a means of keeping children from playing in the streets, where they are in danger of being run over. The photograph shows Miss Lynch, head of a corps of story tellers interesting a little almond-eyed Oriental, of Boston Chinatown, in the life story of Abraham Lincoln. The story tellers are costumed as gypsies and Puritan maids and generally travel about the city in pairs.

PUT A BUSINESS MAN ON THE JOB

ELON HUNTINGTON HOOKER

Candidate for the Republican Nomination

For GOVERNOR

It's time for the business of the State of New York to be run by a business man. Put a man on the job who has the punch and the ability to get things done quickly and done right.

HOOKER says:

The main and most immediate problem is the cost of living, and linked with this is the widespread social unrest.

Our people think. The public interest demands that the people be consulted.

The most vital need of the State is an administration which will seek by every power vested in the Government to encourage, inspire and vitalize all ideas and practices tending toward the following:—

1. Increased production, both in quality and quantity, on the farm and in the shop.
2. Elimination of dangerous radicalism by handling overt acts relentlessly under criminal law and meeting agitation with education.
3. Reduction in the cost of Government by cutting out waste without loss of efficiency.
4. Development of the State's resources to produce additional wealth over which to spread the tax burden.

Disregard of the public no longer should be tolerated by the State. The citizens of this State are entitled to a business-like conduct of their affairs and should demand nothing less.

The Aladdin's Lamp of Business

As the phonograph brings all the world's best musicians and entertainers to your home—

As the moving picture spreads views of all the world before you while you sit in an easy chair—

So the advertising columns of this newspaper bring to you the news of commerce and industry, of merchandise and service.

The advertisements are the shop-windows of the world's wares, passed before your very eyes, that you may look and know where to get the full hundred cents worth of every detailing dollar!

Do you read the advertisements regularly—every day?

If not, you're overlooking the best friend of your pocketbook.

Take time to read the advertisements always.

The very advertisement you also may be the one that will save you the most money and time and disappointment.

So read the advertisements—All of 'em!

BIRDS WON HONOR

Pigeons Certainly "Did Their Bit" in the Great War.

Achievements Acknowledged to Be Worthy of Mention in Records—Thousands of Lives Saved by Messages They Carried.

Membership in the A. P. S. is a military honor no more may be achieved.

The A. P. S. stands for the American Pigeon Service of the United States Army.

When the history of the greatest of all wars is written, these American birds will have their names in the annals.

It will be told how the Huns were organized into shotgun squads to kill the winged messengers, but how 98 per cent of them outdistanced the bullets and "homed" with messages that enabled American artillery to locate and silence the enemy guns, to destroy trains of the foe's ammunition and to save thousands of American lives by reinforcements and timely rescues.

"Heavier-than-air" planes were not the only ones who sailed above the enemy's heads. The army signal corps had 10,000 pigeons overseas and 10,000 in America to be sent if they were needed. Birds carried 408 messages of incalculable importance, and at times when all other means of communication were unavailable.

"The Mocker," with his eye destroyed by a piece of shrapnel and his head a welter of clotting blood, homed in splendid time on the morning of September 12, a few minutes after 7 o'clock, in a thick fog and heavy rain. Never faltering, he bore tidings of a particularly important objective reached and gave the location of several of the enemy's heavy batteries which were doing terrible execution on the advancing American troops.

With the information American artillerymen were able to silence the enemy's guns within 20 minutes. The Mocker's wounds were dressed, he recovered and is now in the loft in Potomac park.

No less valiant in the record of "President Wilson," a huge blue bird of wonderful vitality and rapidity of flight. So gallant was his work during the operations of the tanks on the St. Mihiel front that he received the commendation of the signal officer of the first corps. He was then transferred to the Meuse-Argonne sector.

On the morning of November 5, through heavy rain and fog, and with a leg shot off, the big blue arrived at his loft with an important message. This was his second flight on this front and he made over 20 kilometers (12½ miles) in 21 minutes. "President Wilson" also recovered and is now in the Hall of Honor of the American Pigeon Service.

Perhaps the most heroic bird that did on the American front was "Cher Ami." He carried a tremendously important message from Grand Pre, on the Argonne, over 25 miles of hills and dunes, to his loft in Rampont.

Be shot up from behind the American breastworks like a rocket. His plume saw him falter and flutter in the air a moment, recover, poise in mid-air for a second and then, like a flash of light, shoot away with his head pointing homeward.

At Rampont straight out of the sky like a plummet he dropped, striking the left breast first. Sergt. Kockler, his trainer, found the message tube was hanging from the ligaments of his leg, and he had a hole in his breast. "Cher Ami" died from his wounds and his body is mounted in the Smithsonian Institute.

Perhaps the busiest bird on the American front was "Spike." "Spike" is the color of the sky. His like gleamed lightning and eluded the Boche bullets. He delivered 82 important messages, never made a mistake and didn't get a scratch. He, too, is back in Washington.

Mr. GIBSON has no name yet. As far as is known, he was the only German bird captured alive. He was taken by the Americans in the St. Mihiel drive and is now associating with the American pigeons in Potomac park.

Last of the Barons.

The last holder of the judicial title of Baron to Great Britain passed with the recent death of Dublin of Christopher Paken, who was Baron of the Exchequer in Ireland. The title of Baron was abolished when the court of exchequer was merged with the court of common law, and Lord Chief Baron Paken was the last holder of it.

He was the solicitor general for Ireland in 1877, and the same year was promoted attorney general. After holding the latter office for two years, he became lord chief baron and held that position until 1896.

He was one of the ablest lawyers on the Irish bench and one of the wisest. He had a great regard for the dignity of his court. He was eighty-nine years of age when he died.

General Vandenberg Production.

American inventors are said to be in complete control of the vanadium industry which is located in the western States, from which country about 95 per cent of the material is obtained. Vanadium has now become one of the vital factors of the steel industry. Four pounds of this material added to a ton of steel results in an increase of 40 per cent in the strength of the steel and at the same time produces an alloy which has extraordinary resisting qualities. The quantity of it used is considerable.

Showering Green Spots.

To remove green spots from curtains the latter's cords and margins should be laid out on a flat surface and covered with a cloth. Then pour a quart of water and spread on the spots. The next day brush it off and, if necessary, repeat the process.

CREATION FOR YOUNG WOMAN

A gown of pearl gray silk poplin; the material is just the thing for an outfit of this type. Scalloped fringe and three-tiered skirt are unusual. The picturesque bodice, the admirable touch of old lace, and a floral cluster add to its loveliness and quaintness.

FASHIONS AND FADS

Printed tricotettes are the latest. Panels continue to be in great favor. Gold is much used for evening gowns.

Scallops are among the prettiest decorations for tulle frocks.

The nipped-in waist-line appears in many new spring suit jackets.

The silhouette of the tailored suit is straight, slim and unbelled.

Gray suede pumps, with steel buckles are very good style.

Cotton smocks have a great deal of embroidery upon them.

If the skirt is not draped it is sure to show plaiting in some form.

Some evening gowns are showing tiny puffs or lace caps for sleeves.

Many spring coats are black, cross-barred with some brilliant color.

Most of the neck lines are high in the back, forming a deep V in front.

Satin charmeuse draped with headed georgette is conservative, but always satisfactory.

The smartest hat of the season is the little turned up hat of cloth, brightened with a bit of gold or silver embroidery.

Jersey dresses are still worn and they have permanently adopted the long string belt.

Self-covered buttons have never been more fashionable, especially for tailored frocks.

Novelty weaves in tricotettes are being used for spring blouses.

There are some interesting domestic smocks of wool jersey.

LATE STYLES ARE EGYPTIAN

Hats Are to Adopt New Form Named After the Sphinx of the Desert.

The latest Paris touch, "Egyptian," a single word but of what significance. Hats are to adopt a new form named after the sphinx of the desert, which translated technically means a toque effect with carapace. A new blue of exceeding richness is about to appear based on the blue of the little statues found in the sarcophagi in the pyramids. It will be appropriately known as Egyptian blue.

Amulets will be worn, not of the orthodox variety, but rather little medallions for the front of hats and gowns, in order to modernize the charms worn on their foreheads by the Egyptian women.

The lotus and the scarab will be brought out from the dust of the tomb to adorn the headwear of the women of 1920. Egyptian forms and designs having been accepted, the prevailing colors will be the rich reds, blues and blacks that are found on the papyrus manuscripts.

Handbags will depart from their traditional lines for a season and will emulate Egyptian ideas in painted silks, beaded designs and gaily striped frames adorned with separate motifs.

Fishing Ten Frocks.

Ten frocks of embroidery batiste and Simons of Bat set on art and apron trunks of batiste are worn at southern resorts. A frock of white chamois having a large central green panel dot design and central green satin ribbon was run through white silk, forming in three tiers of the skirt. It embodied the short sleeves and surplice flow of the waist. A wide gold fringe of green corded in one large loop. Two longaveled ends fell from the left hip.

Sundries for Spring.

New sundries for spring are interesting, colorful and modern. They are of silk, and have pockets, belts and collars. Sleeves are long, and many are belted at the waist.

Batteries Well Loaded.

Ralph enjoyed riding in the morning and heard his father often complete of the batteries and thought they made it special. When his father kept up his constant crying one evening he said: "I bet your batteries will never run down."

UNCONSCIOUS HUMOR.

A published interview with the mother of Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, the notorious draft dodger, who recently escaped from prison, furnishes an amusing illustration of the difference between history as it is written and history as it is sometimes understood. During the Civil War, as during the late war, the need of able-bodied men at home as well as at the front was officially recognized. This accounts for the fact that no discredit attaches to Grover Cleveland's earlier career in consequence of printed accounts thereof containing such statements as the following: "During the war, his two brothers being in the Union army, the support of the family fell upon him. Unable to enlist, he borrowed money to pay for a substitute."

Upon this bit of history Mrs. Emma Bergdoll bases the mirth-provoking assumption that a distinguished President of the United States and her disgraced son are kindred spirits. Standing among her pots and pans which she chooses to handle herself, this rich woman said to the reporter: "Yes, I named him Grover Cleveland after President Cleveland was elected the second time. President Cleveland was the greatest President because there wasn't no war nor bloodshed when he was President. No, sir. And he was a slacker, too, just like my Grover. How do I know? God is heaven, ain't I got it? Buck upstairs what tells all about it. Yes, sir, he was a slacker, and the greatest President ever had. He got to be a great man and if my Grover is a slacker, maybe some day he will be a great man, too." Disregarding the assumption of the name of an honored President with that of a notorious offender may now give place to gratitude for the boon of a hearty laugh.

THE HANDICAP OF WEALTH.

A considerable part of Marshall Field's accumulations went to England when his daughters and the daughters of his partner, Levi S. Leiter, married into the British nobility, but doubtless the greater part was left on this side of the Atlantic, for when he died his estate amounted to more than a hundred millions. It appears from the case now before the Chicago courts that the great merchant had up his estate until his hair or hairs reached the age of fifty. We read that under the will "Captain Field will get half a million at the age of 30, $1,300,000 at 35, $1,600,000 at 40; at 45 he will receive the accumulated interest, amounting to $90,000,000; during the next five years he will receive $2,000,000 a year, and on his 55th birthday he will get the whole estate." Marshall Field's purpose in thus tying up his estate, according to his own statement, was to protect his descendants from "leading useless lives of luxury and idleness," and to provide them with the "opportunity of becoming men among men, despite the handicap of great wealth."

But his plan, even if sustained by law, will hardly achieve this worthy purpose. Little incentive to make a career for himself is left to the man who knows that many millions will pour into his lap at stated intervals between thirty and fifty. The desired results would be much more likely of attainment if Mr. Field had devoted the bulk of his fortune to public institutions and only moderately provided for his heirs, thus preserving them from actual want while forcing upon them the necessity of earnest effort in order to make a place for themselves in the world.

The police of several cities have been called on to look for a missing wife who is described as a 22-year-old Swedish blonde with a brilliant tan followed on her back. Her's a description for the detective's survey when evening comes over on beds. Why not provide entertainment at evening functions by means of unusual questions from favorite authors on all these cases of missing ladies?

The French completed President because the Germans repudiated their agreement and concentrated heavy forces in the Ruhr district. The French have now marched out of Frankfurt because the Germans have reduced their armies on the Ruhr to the permitted strength. The much criticized French move has accomplished its purpose.

STATE TROOPERS PROTECT ROADS

Campaign Against Trucks That Violate the Law and Tear Up Roads Will Have State Huge Amount of Money

The State Troopers began a campaign this morning all over the state to enforce the law against the use of automobile trucks that are overloaded or over size. These trucks are tearing up the roads and will do incalculable damage if not regulated and checked at once. There seems to be nobody to look after this but the State Troopers, who have for some time been endeavoring to enforce the law. Today they began a regular and systematic campaign. Four ambulances furnished by the war department started out, each carrying a representative of the state highway department and two troopers. Each ambulance is equipped with an apparatus for weighing motor trucks and has conspicuously painted on it a statement that it is operated by the state. Motor trucks that seem over large will be halted, measured and weighed and if found to be violating the law will be seized and the drivers or owners prosecuted. The running of these trucks over the highways would, if continued, damage the 15,000 miles of improved roads in this state to the extent of at least a million dollars this season. Major George F. Chandler is in personal charge of the campaign, which started today in four sections of the state and will be continued until tearing up of the roads is stopped. If successful in this work the State Troopers will have saved, in this one line of activity, more of the taxpayers' money in one season than the entire cost of maintaining the force for a number of years.

The "Daring Game"

Saugerties is one of the oldest towns in the state. The earliest mention of Saugerties is in the records of the Dutch colony of Catskill as a village of Catholics on the banks of the Hudson river. It was founded by Dutch settlers in 1614, and named "Saugerties" meaning "daring game."

FOUGHT OVER CAPTAIN'S BODY
Supper-time Sailors Wanted Commander Consigned to Sea—Others Would Carry Corpses to Port.

A weird tale of shipwreck, death at sea, and the fierce, rough-and-tumble battles of superstition, hard-fisted seafaring men was revealed when Attorney John R. Tyrell filed for probate to the superior court the will of Capt. Charles D. Olsen, master of the clipper ship James Rolph, Jr., the San Francisco Chronicle states.

Olsen died on the return from Liverpool with his ship in ballast. At one stage of the trip his ship was wrecked, and since it was not heard of for a long time was given up as lost. He got it off the rocks, patched it up and continued the voyage. Then he became ill and died.

With him on the voyage were his wife, their eight-year-old daughter, and the child's nurse. After his death certain members of the crew insisted that he should be buried at sea. The captain was honored and respected by all his men, and the insistence of some of them on burial at sea was due to their firm belief that it was the fitting burial for a seafaring man, and that ill fortune would strike the vessel if it were not done.

Others of the crew, the majority, argued that the body should be borne to land, as Mrs. Olsen desired. When the arguments ceased but the dispute remained to sea, land and claim, an ill-tempered and quarrelsome by the ship's officers. The body was then taken into the hold of the vessel and buried four feet deep in the ballast.

When the ship reached Panama the crew was disordered and believed to be the best to be taken ashore and cremated. Superstition again caused trouble, and a sailor named Larson, the Mexican man on the ship, leaped to the side of the coffin when it reached the deck and with a knife threatened to kill anyone who attempted to remove the body from the ship before it was safe to the home port of San Francisco, because of his belief that all luck would certainly come to the ship if it were moved.

By a rare but not unusual and hot away. The body was taken ashore.

When the arguments ceased but the dispute remained to sea, land and claim, an ill-tempered and quarrelsome by the ship's officers. The body was then taken into the hold of the vessel and buried four feet deep in the ballast.

When the ship reached Panama the crew was disordered and believed to be the best to be taken ashore and cremated. Superstition again caused trouble, and a sailor named Larson, the Mexican man on the ship, leaped to the side of the coffin when it reached the deck and with a knife threatened to kill anyone who attempted to remove the body from the ship before it was safe to the home port of San Francisco, because of his belief that all luck would certainly come to the ship if it were moved.

By a rare but not unusual and hot away. The body was taken ashore.

Special Steels Eliminate Useless Weight in a

MAXWELL

The reason the Maxwell engine is so responsive and yet thrifty, the reason the tires roll into big mileages is due largely to one fact: A Maxwell is burdened with no useless weight.

Special steels make this so. They are made to Maxwell's own formulae. No other steel in any car is just like them.

These special steels are of great strength and make possible the ideal Maxwell construction of brute strength with light weight.

Obviously, they are high priced metals. They equal, pound for pound, the steels in any car built.

The wisdom of their use in the Maxwell becomes evident when one observes the rapid growth in public favor of this remarkable car.

Consider that nearly 400,000 of them are now in use; that 100,000 more will be added to this total in 1920.

Cut your Kitchen Hours

No more getting up to kindle fires. No more coal scuttles to fill or ashes to carry, and no more soot. All the drudgery that makes kitchen hours drag, abolished. The New Perfection Oil Cook Stove gives full cooking heat the instant the match is applied.

The long, blue chimney on this stove concentrates the flame and gives just the proper draft for perfect combustion. At the same time this chimney drives all the heat directly to the spot where it does the most good.

A special feature of the built-in oven cook stove is the heat-retaining oven. Give it thirty minutes of quick heat—close the damper and turn the burner off. All the heat is retained in the oven until the food is to be served.

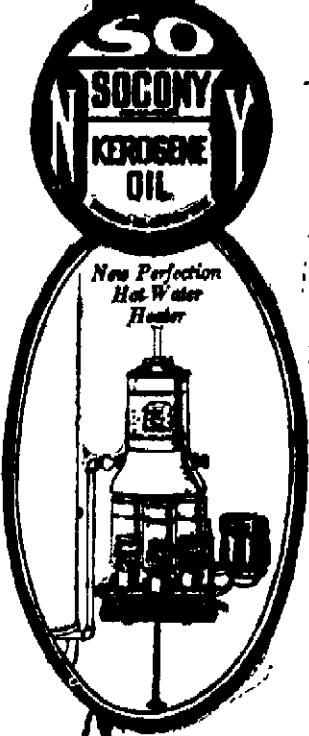

The New Perfection Oil Cook Stove has 3,000,000 users. It comes in 1, 2, 3 and 4-burner sizes.

MEMORIAL SERVICE AT HOLY CROSS

Legion Chaplain Made the War Dead
In Poetic Language, Calling on Them to Continue the Fight for Right—Father Hughson Masterful in Patriotic Sermon at Vespers.

From a pulpit draped with the national and church colors, the Superior General of the Order of the Holy Cross, Father Shirley C. Hughson, delivered a sermon at the Memorial Day service for the American Legion held in Holy Cross Church, Pine Grove avenue. The service was held Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock and was presided over by Father Gregory Mabry, chaplain of the local post of the legion, and major in the American army. Father Mabry intoned vespers, using the special lesson and collect authorized by the bishop of the diocese of New York, after which Father Hughson preached from the text, "Righteousness Exalteth a Nation," emphasizing the importance of personal righteousness of individuals in the making of a strong nation. The two hymns, "Our Father's God! to Thee" and "O, God Our Help in Ages Past," were sung, and the services concluded with prayers for the dead and the playing of the "Dead March" from "Saul," by Handel.

Monday morning at 9 o'clock Father Mabry celebrated a Solemn Mass of Requiem for the war dead, during which he delivered a patriotic, hailing the hero dead as "The Knights of the Golden Star." He said in part:

"Again we hail you, you Knights of the Golden Star! Not that you have ever been absent from our hearts, nor that we could ever forget you; but again do we love to recall you, and profit from the memory."

"And how we need to recall you! lest the enemy of today overthrow us and yet win the victory for which you died; lest we grow fat-spirited and perish in the quicksands of selfishness. You inspired us so before; oh, deny us not that aid today! You not only helped us to play our parts as men in the more daring aspects of the strife; the bayonet charges, the advances through the rain of machine gun fire, the hand-to-hand combat; but you cheered us in that far more difficult side of war; the filth and boredom of the trenches, the long, monotonous operations without visible results, the torture of the rain, the cold, the mud, the snow, the bad food, the vermin, without sight of the enemy, without understanding what it was all about. You helped us through all of that; and the howling of the dogs of war is hushed."

"Now it is a new phase of wrong we men on earth must fight. In these days work is only endured for the sake of money and what money will buy, in these days the rich and the poor seem to vie with one another as to which will do the less work; Greed and sloth contend with right for the mastery. Oh, Golden Knights, draw your invisible swords, and fight with us as in the former days, that your noble example may endure on the earth forever!"

They have put one over on little Eric Rainbird, six-year-old traveler, although he does not know about it yet. Eric is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Eric Rainbird, of New York city, and has made seven trips across the Atlantic Ocean. Heretofore he has been accompanied by his parents, but this time he took the idea of being accompanied any more, announcing that he had courted his parents across often enough and they could shift for themselves during his visit to his grandparents in Dorling, England. All the way across he is to sit with the captain and to be boss of the craft. But what Eric does not know is that the partner of the big vessel has been tipped to keep an eye on him and see that Eric does not start for himself overboard or climb on the mahogany structure, or get lost when the ship docks. So Eric, elated at voyaging unaccompanied and without guardians, is after all, being escorted and guarded, for they put one over on him. Eric was born in England.

Willing to Take a Chance

Mother was trying to give her small son a dose of cod liver oil, and after much coaxing and pleading he would not swallow it. She said to her husband: "Daddy will not take the oil; we will just have to use more force." Daddy's face brightened and he said: "Daddy will take the force and I will try to swallow that."

D. A. R. OBSERVE MEMORIAL DAY

At the close of the morning service at the First Reformed Dutch Church on Sunday, Wiltwyck Chapter, R. A. D., assisted by the children of the Sunday school, held special Memorial Day exercises and decorated with flowers the graves of the Revolutionary soldiers in the church yard.

After the playing of "Rally Round the Flag" and "America" by the band, prayer was offered by the Rev. George M. Cranston, pastor of the Clinton Avenue M. E. Church. After a short Scripture reading by the Rev. Dr. Leeper and the playing of one verse of "Onward Christian Soldiers," led by W. Whiting Frobenburgh, organist of the church, Dr. Leeper made a short patriotic address, at the close of which the band played another verse of "Onward Christian Soldiers."

Dr. Leeper then introduced Major Everett, who paid the tribute of the day to the Revolutionary and Civil War veterans sleeping their last sleep under the shadow of the beautiful church and the over-spreading branches of the magnificent trees. Major Everett said among other things that he represented the connecting link between the Revolutionary and the World War, for he could well remember his grandfather who told him of being in the Revolutionary War and he himself had lived through the great World War. His tribute to the soldier dead of the two early wars of this country was, as always, inspiring to the men, women and children of today.

The third speaker was Major Meagher, whose privilege it was to pay tribute to the men of the World War, and this he did most eloquently, speaking highest words of praise of the men who made the supreme sacrifice.

After the playing of the Star Spangled Banner by the band, and the pronouncing of the benediction, the children of the Sunday school, under the direction of the members of the D. A. R., decorated the soldier graves with flowers, and another milestone in the history of our country, our state and city was passed.

Yet impressive as were the services, the scene of the gathered group of men, women and children, out under the trees in the height of the noonday sun that shone down on that little section of God's acre, was somehow the most impressive feature of the program as being an earnest of that Americanism that is in-born and therefore bound to find expression in the truest and best manner, always remembering to whom this country's safety today is due.

CONDENSED CLASSICS

THE PILOT

By JAMES FREDERICK COOPER

Condensation by Alfred Clark

Cooper was born in New Jersey in 1796, but when only about a year old removed to his father's estate at Cooperstown, New York, where he died in 1851. There he learned to know the wilderness which plays so important a part in his books, and there, too, he probably acquired that headstrong opinion of others which made him while one of the few most widely read authors in the world, one of the most cordially detested individuals to be found. He had a positive genius for getting in bad. While Dickens and Kipling deeply wounded our nation by their American Notes, they were pagans in this respect compared to Cooper. He could exasperate any and everybody and apparently cultivated with pleasure his habit of irritating. Lowell wrote of him as "Cooper, who's written six volumes to prove he's as good as a lord." An English magazine described him as a "billionaire braggart," a "liar," a "full jackass," an "incompetent," and a "scoundrel." The "New Yorker" pleasantly wrote of him: "He is as proud of blackguarding as a fish-woman is of billfishing. It is as natural to him as snorting to a tomat or growling to a bulldog. He has the scorn and contempt of every well-informed American."

ON a late afternoon of a winter's day during the American Revolution, a rakish schooner and a majestic frigate anchored well inside a little bay on the northeastern coast of England. A whaleboat drove shoreward, a young officer scrambled up the steep cliffs and a few minutes later a mysterious stranger was transferred to the frigate's deck. He answered to the name of "Mr. Gray" and was said to be merely a pilot but he was greeted with surprising deference.

For no ordinary man would these vessels have ventured so near that coast of sandbars and hidden rocks. The wind was a mere ruffle of air. But the incessant mutter of the long, slow waves foretold that a storm was brewing. Ever more fitfully and faintly blew the land-breeze; the mutter of the waters grew deeper. Only here and there did a few stars twinkle between the fast gathering clouds. It was time to beat out to open sea if it were not even now too late. Men swarmed aloft and hung up the yards; sails fluttered out; the anchor was pulled in; the frigate gathered headway. Then the faint breeze died. The spread of canvas hung useless; the currents drove the ship shoreward.

With a roar the wind came suddenly from the east. White spray dashed from the bow. Yet the Pilot paced the quarter-deck seemingly oblivious to danger. But open water was far ahead and suddenly from the fore-castle came that dreaded cry, "Breakers! breakers, dead ahead!" The Pilot shook off his trance of thought. His orders thundered forth, sailors sprang hither and thither at his bidding, the frigate swung about at his cry of "Hold on everything!" Tortuously she picked her way through the twisting channels, in darkness amid the howlings of the great winds.

She shivered from bow to stern as a hundred men loosed the huge mainsail. The jib was torn free with a crash like a cannon's blast, but the big sail held and the frigate bowed like a reed in the wind. White foam showed dimly upon both sides, but the Pilot kept the ship, as by a miracle, within a narrow ribbon of dark water. He took the wheel himself. Time and again the frigate seemed to have reeled free from peril; time and again she plunged anew toward a welter of white water. But she drove ever on and at last she rode the great waves of the open sea.

Not the storm alone had these ships dared. They were American vessels, lurking about an enemy's coast. This little bay had a peculiar fascination for two young lieutenants aboard, Edward Griffith and Richard Barnstable. Not far inland lived Colonel Howard, a Tory who had fled from America when the colonists revolted. With him dwelt his niece, Cecilia Howard, beloved by Griffith, and his ward, Katherine Flounders, betrothed to Barnstable. In St. Ruth's abbey lingered, too, Christopher Dillon, a poor knight anxious to better his condition by wedding the wealthy Cecilia. Redoubts lent a picturesque to the venerable abbey, for a small carriage under Captain Berroughcliffe had been summoned by the owner. For aught that men knew, John Paul Jones himself might be aboard these ships hovering nearby.

While reconnoitering the coast about "Mr. Gray" and Griffith were captured, but Berroughcliffe's treachery rendered them to escape. Griffith was, however, released.

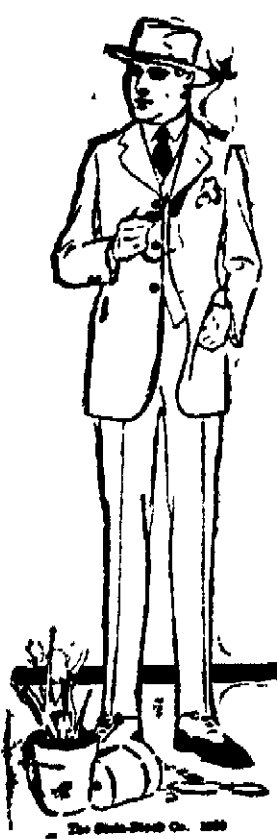

The impatient Barnstable, fretting offshore with his charming cousin's, Long Tom Collis, had been nearly cut off from his schooner by an English cutter, but he scrambled aboard safely and the drum beat to quarters. While broadsides poured and the decks grew slippery with blood, the little schooner slipped out and grappled. Before Barnstable could lead his band to the enemy's deck, Collis tumbled into the sea. Shouting "Beware Long Tom!" the lieutenant rushed with his men upon the foe. It was fighting at close quarters and the tempo was in doubt when the drucked and furious en-emerged from the sea and with his harpoon plucked the English captain to his mast. In a few minutes the Americans were masters of the cutter. Covering in that sense of bloodshed the victors discovered the crafty Dillon, who pleaded to be sent off as a hostage, promising to return in person or to have Griffith delivered in his stead.

His word of honor was trusted and he was sent away with Long Tom. He luckily overheard Dillon's treacherous plot to betray Barnstable's waiting party. The resourceful old seaman seized Berroughcliffe and drove Dillon, at the point of his harpoon, back to the waiting schooner. By this time, however, a battery on the cliff brought down the schooner's mast. She was driven from her course by heavy seas. The masts were felled and anchors dropped, but she plunged on like a bobbing cork in rapids. Barnstable would have stayed by his ship but suddenly Long Tom started him and hurried him over the bowsprit. "God will be done with me," Collis cried, above the wind's roar. Dillon's bloodshot body was rolled upon the shore, but Long Tom's stayed with the sea to which he had dedicated his life.

Purpose succeeded surprise at the abbey. Barnstable searched his shipwrecked survivors from the buildings and they took sanctuary, but they were soon made prisoners by the redoubts. Then the mysterious figure of the Pilot appeared at the door and behind him loomed the marines from the frigate. Colonel Howard, an unwilling prisoner, was marched away with Cecilia and Katherine, who could not be drawn out at the triumph of their lovers.

Captain Berroughcliffe was freed, as was another inmate of the abbey, Alfred Dismore. She had recognized the Pilot in his disguise when he was first captured. They had been lovers, but she was so staunch in her love for her king and she so hated bloodshed that she had broken her truth to this "Mr. Gray," whom she addressed as John. She reminded him that did she but were call aloud his true name the whole countryside would ring with it. What that name was to never revealed, but there was but one son ever who could strike stark terror into all English hearts.

On board the frigate repeated conversations were held between the captain, Griffith and "Mr. Gray." The ship of the sea drove a mountainous ship of the line. The drum beat about the frigate, sailors leaped nimbly about the deck, clearing for action. The women were led below and gradually order resolved itself out of the chaos of shouting men. A terrific roar filled the air as three tons of gun-blaze broadside from the English ship. A few sails and ropes were cut, but the frigate's sailing power was hardly affected. The cannon ball struck the captain and hurled him to death. Griffith succeeded to the command and he was applied as he saw the frigate heaved about. To the east loomed the great ship of war and far in the northeast the sails of another frigate.

"What are we to do?" cried Griffith. "Fight them! Fight them!" shouted the Pilot. "Let me proclaim your name to the men," Griffith appealed. But the Pilot refused. "Should we come to a struggle," he said, "I will give forth the name as a war-cry and these English will quell before it."

The ship of war was distanced, but she cut off a retreat and the frigate ahead had been re-entranced by two others. The foremost maneuvered with the American frigate for position. Broadside crashed and they grappled. The American guns raked her and left her helpless, with cannon ropes dangling from shattered masts. The deck was cleared and as another enemy appeared, Griffith shouted, "Beat away of everything!" Fifty men leapt upon the spar and white canvas was spread from every mast. The frigate heaved about, but it could not counter its rival, and the hull to give battle had enabled the ship of the line to draw up.

Then, for a few breathless moments, the Pilot leaped into command. Broadside crashed about, but he drove the enemy straight into the clouds. Two narrow passages where white canvas bobbed perilously close. The enemy dared not follow, and when night fell retreat was imperative.

Colonel Howard, badly wounded in the battle, lived long enough to see Cecilia Howard and Katherine Flounders wedded by the captain to their lover. His last words were spoken to Griffith. "Perhaps I may have mistaken my duty to America—but I was too old to change my politics or my religion: I—I—I loved the king—God bless him—"

The frigate drove on to England, where the Pilot landed in a small boat that drifted into a black speck and disappeared in the setting sun. Twelve years later Cecilia Griffith saw her husband's face close to be read in the newspaper of the death of a great man, but not even then did he divulge his name. He had promised to keep it secret. He said only, "Our happiness might have been wrecked in the wreckage of life had we not met the unknown Pilot of the German coast."

SENT DOWN WATER

Example of Golden Rule in Western Utah.

Farmers of the Sevier Valley Gladly Deprived Themselves of Precious Liquid to Save Crops of the Less Fortunate.

It had been the hottest and driest summer ever recorded on the Pahvant plains in western Utah. More water than ever before was needed for the Pahvant crops; but as the previous winter had been recorded as having an extremely light snowfall, the late summer flow of the Sevier river (pronounced "severe") from the snow-stores of the Wasatch mountains, was at a minimum.

Therefore in spite of rigid water economy there was an insufficient supply to mature the crops in that region. Early in the season it became apparent that if some good rains did not come at timely intervals there would be widespread devastation of the crops; and despite the earnest hopes of the people, the windows of the sky remained sealed so far as the rain was concerned, and the brass skies drank up every speck of moisture everywhere, even draining the reservoir dry a month before the potatoes and beets were matured. The apples fell to the ground withered, and the alfalfa stubble could not send out the shoots for the third crop of hay, the drought was so thorough.

After experts had been consulted with no good result, an official of the water farm bureau, with a few other citizens, made an inspiring ride in automobiles up through a small range of mountains into the Sevier valley, where the crops had not suffered greatly, owing to the fact that the farmers in this region held primary rights to the water of the river. The modern Paul Revere, coming to the rescue of the unfortunate farmers further down the stream, appealed to the irrigation company officials in this region, and requested the loan of the river for 24 hours.

They were assured in response that the Golden Rule reached not only across the Sevier valley, but on down to the Pahvant as well, and a vote taken was unanimous in favor of closing the Sevier valley head gates by midnight that very night and leaving them closed as requested.

The returning midnight riders reached Pahvant valley many hours before the water, which began to arrive late the next forenoon. The mammoth Sevier river, no longer full and turbulent at this time of the year, but flowing abundantly, nevertheless, went bounding joyfully down through the stony canyons, carrying good tidings of the genuine friendship of the Sevier valley farmers.

That afternoon every Pahvant farmer was in his fields guiding the precious water across the lands, where it blossomed back into liveliness and hope the despondent crops; and all that night and the next day the men labored on in gratitude, until the water began to dwindle, and then finally ceased. But it was enough; 2,200 acres of crops worth hundreds of thousands of dollars, were saved and a community was made happy.—Christian Science Monitor.

An African Pompeii.

During the war archaeological excavations were continued at the Italian colony of Cyrenaica on the North African coast, and now comes the news that what has been found already promises the uncovering of another ancient city as important as Pompeii. Once upon a time the spot was a Greek colony, with the civilization of Greece transplanted to the soil of Africa. The work has been carried on during the war under the supervision of Lucio Mariani, director of the archaeological services of the ministry of colonies, and the prediction is now made that the newly discovered city will eventually prove actually richer than Pompeii in its evidences of a past civilization. Here have been already found statues of the Graces, a Hermes, an Apollo, an Alexander the Great, and most impressive of all, the Aphrodite of Cyrene, which is said by certain connoisseurs to be a fair rival in beauty of Venus of Milo and the Venus of Capri. The discoveries have extended over many years.

Possible.

"Is it possible for a man to get thoroughly drunk in this town if he is willing to pay the price?" asked an arid arrival.

"Well, yes; I reckon it's possible," replied the landlord of the Pegasus tavern. "But it don't hardly seem probable. You see the bootlegger takes you upstairs and down cellar and round and round like the ragged rascal ran round the ragged rock in McGuffey's old Third Reader, and on on and so forth, and then charges you 50 cents for catarracting three drops of diluted Piker on your tongue with an eye dropper. Now, a body could get drunk that way if he was rich enough, but it don't seem like an awful waste of time, money and patience."—Kansas City Star.

The Mangled Class.

"Who is that poor shabby little girl the others don't play with?"

"Oh, she's a college professor's daughter."

"And who are the little girls who look down on her?"

"Those? Oh, they are little souls whose fathers work by the day."

Infancy of Rice Cultivation.

Rice was cultivated centuries ago in India and later in Egypt. About the year 1600 the cultivation spread to southern Europe. In 1847 Sir William Harvey planted one-half a bushel of seed in Virginia.

THE TROY SUNDAY BUDGET

Established June 20, 1897.

Troy, N. Y., Sunday, May 2, 1920.

I. L. B. CURRY AND ALBERT A. MAC NAUGHTON.

VALUABLE PICTURES

During the past week the Trojan Theatre presented moving pictures which conveyed valuable lessons to those who saw them, especially young men and women. They showed the effects of the loathsome diseases resulting from what is termed the social evil, and these awful results to the human system and the generations to come are not as fully realized and understood as they should be. If they were, people would certainly exercise more restraint in subjecting themselves to the frightful dangers of contracting the diseases.

The moving pictures faithfully portray the exact effects, for they were made from the unfortunate subjects who were afflicted, and in addition explanations, precautions and advice were given on the screen. The management of the theatre has arranged to continue the pictures through this week and every person in Troy who has attained the age of reason should make an effort to see them. The show is not immodest, but wonderfully instructive. The men and women are not permitted to attend together. Therefore, mothers should take their daughters, and fathers, their sons.

We should have no false modesty in learning how to take care of ourselves, especially when such care also means the physical and mental strength of our children. Parents make a serious mistake in permitting their children to remain ignorant of the great lessons taught in the pictures of "Some Wild Oats." A large proportion of our physical and mental ills are the results of the indiscretions and diseases against which the pictures so vividly warn.

Thursday morning Prof. Elery, supervisor of the history department of Vassar College, spoke to the High School students on "After High School, What?" She told of the different vocations which could be taken up by the pupils after they leave high school. Her talk was very interesting and she spoke in an unusually impressive manner.

Friday morning Chester Young spoke to the high school assembly on "Farming, Its Advantages and Disadvantages." His talk was very instructive and he gave very interesting facts about the life of the farmer.

Wednesday afternoon the Sophomore baseball team defeated the Juniors in a fast game at McVey's Field. The score was 10-3, but the Sophs had to play hard to down the Juniors. The battery for the Juniors was Rowland and Albrecht, pitchers, with Meyant and Norwood receiving,
while Dressel twirled for the Sophs with Sangaline receiving.

Friday afternoon the Sophs defeated the Seniors to the tune of 7-6.
Murray and Foster twirled for the Seniors with Kullmann catching, while Dressel pitched for the Sophs with Sangaline picking them off the bat.

Wednesday afternoon the K. H. S.

of the Catskill team. The locals lost out by one set.

Saturday afternoon the K. H. S.
tennis team met defeat in Hudson when they played two sets and won one out of two, but did not have time to finish a third set. Thus the third was forfeited. The team is:
Captain Purcell, Dressel and Has-brook.

Saturday the Kingston High School nine broke even with the Millbrook High School team when each team won a game. The first game was easily won by Millbrook with a 10-4 score, but Kingston opened up in the second game and won 11-6.

In the morning game, Goldberg started on the mound for Kingston but he did not last very long and Caunitz replaced him and did great work for the remainder of the game.
However, the support of the team was poor and despite Caunitz's good work the local boys lost out.
Meeker and Rott did some rather sensational playing in their regular positions.

There could be no grand stand playing as the crowd was not large enough to warrant such action.
M. Duncan, who pitched for Millbrook, did some very good work and received excellent support from his team.

In the afternoon game, the Maroon and White boys rallied and with Caunitz on the slab started out in grand style. His pitching was regular big league style and despite the fact that he pitched seven innings in the morning he held out to the last and added another victory to his list.

This was the sixth game that he had pitched in and his work has been splendid. Twice during this game, he pulled himself out of bad holes when, with one down, and three Millbrook men on base, he struck the next two out or retired them in some clever maneuver. No doubt he could have pulled a "victory" out of the "coals of defeat" in the morning, had he had good support behind him and less errors to overcome.

The team braced up in this game and gave Caunitz a little bit better support.

M. Duncan, who pitched all but the first two innings of the second game, proved to be a fine ball player and even in the face of defeat wore a broad smile as he twirled 'em over the plate to the local lads.

E. Duncan made some wonderful catches in his left field position.

Despite the loss of one game,
Kingston High School still holds first position in the Central Hudson Valley Inter-Scholastic League.

Next Saturday, the Kingston High School nine will play the Newburgh Academy team on the Athletic Field on Cornhill street. The local team has defeated the "Mill City" boys on their own diamond and feel very sure that they can repeat the performance here at home. Kingston and Newburgh are the top pitchers in the Inter-Scholastic League, the latter team running Kingston strong.

There will be the usual small admission fee. The game will begin promptly at 2:30 p. m.

What Appealed to Robert.

His father wasn't system in how Robert play with a cricket with in the neighborhood where language wasn't always proper, so he said,
"Robert, you are to see that you always have a dirty face: if I were you I'd play with someone else that in town."

To which Robert responded,
"Why, daddy, I don't need to look at his face—but he's got the best legs on the ball team."
